Beef Cattlemen's Meeting

A Spray for Home Gardens

Nearly every home gardener who to grow fruits, soon realizes spraying is necessary to control ects and diseases. There are a ber of commercially prepared ticides on the market which may used as all-purpose sprays. Such ray is the most practical for me gardener. Occasionally, a cial spray mixture may be need-The mixture below has proven factory and may be mixed easily. The ingredients are 2½ pounds methoxychlor - 50% wettable powder, plus three pounds malathion - 25% wettable powder, plus 2 pounds Captan or Ferbam. If Ferbam is used, it should be added to the sprayer just before spraying the fruit. This prevents the deterioration of the chemicals. If Captan is used, it should be used with the dry ingredients thoroughly, at one time.

The mixed chemicals should be stored in a tight container and labelled properly, and when preparing to spray, use 7 tablespoons of the dry stock for each one gallon of water.

For additional details, see Circular 638 available at the County Agent's Office.

Cattlemen's Short Course

VPI will be host to the Cattlemen's Short Course, March 6, 7, and 8. Members of the VPI Animal Husbandry Staff will discuss feeding, dwarfism, parasite control, buildings and equipment, and the economic outlook.

The highlight of the meeting will be the banquet on Wednesday evening when Charles E. Bell, Chief of the Animal Industry Branch, U. S. D. A., wil discuss adjustments needed in the cattle industry.

W. L. Glover of the Virginia Beef Cattle Improvement Association will be on the program to discuss performance testing. Other speakers will include representatives from the three major beef associations: C. V. Wilson, of the University of West Virginia; Jack Graves, cattle breeder, of Syrria; and B. M. Priode, of the Front Royal Research Station.

Grub Control

Dairymen and beef cattlemen should check their cattle for the presence of grubs which form lumps on the backs of cattle. This is caused by the heel fly which lays eggs on the heel of the animal in late summer or fall. The eggs hatch and the larvae penetrate the skin and work upwards toward the top of the back. The damage occurs in injury to the hides.

They can be killed by spraying with 7½ pounds of rotenone — 50% wettable powder per 100 gallons of water.
